Theme 15

Paving the way towards interspecies economy

Presented by Nadezda Nazarova, Associate Professor from Nord University

The project I have been recently working on is on human-animal relationships. I study the so-called suffering others problem and criticize the role of accounting that used to present animals, including marine ones, as raw materials with certain exchange value. Welcoming posthumanism ideas in accounting on animals I study interspecies accountability relations and the potential for more intelligent accountability in humans' relationships with non-humans, i.e. fish, ice, snow, etc. I do qualitative research, field and ethnography work, to emphasize the encounter value of human-animal relationships when animals are not only looked at but can also look back.
